

College of Arts & Sciences

Mission Statement

The College of Arts & Sciences has the central role in the liberal arts mission of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. It functions both as a confederation of departments and as a collective unit: it promotes rigorous disciplinary research and teaching, and it fosters intellectual community and critical inquiry across the disciplines, with the professional schools and with the public. It is committed to these goals:

- To provide opportunities for exemplary liberal arts education to all University students.
- To provide sound undergraduate majors in a range of traditional liberal arts fields and in cognate applied and professional programs housed in the College.
- To build excellent graduate programs in selected areas and to strengthen mutually supportive interrelationships between graduate and undergraduate education.
- To support high-quality teaching, research, scholarship, and creative expression.
- To facilitate and enhance interdisciplinary discourse, research, curricular planning, and community.
- To work cooperatively with the professional schools.
- To develop mutually beneficial relationships with public communities.

Approved by the College Assembly

April 24, 1989